M. ANDRE CHEBILION, IN THE PROUE

The existing religion of India is one those fabrics as complex, irregular, at multifold as the roof of a pagoda or the chasing of a Beneros vase. It is an out growth of Brahmaniam, through develop ment, like the foliage, the seed, the flowers, and, in fact, the entire vegetable product of the smooth and erect trunk of the tree Its sects, its rites, its mes cannot be numbered. It is impossible to grasp them to discover in them any degmas of andamental articles of faith, or to unrav the ch of threads of its texture. A little of everything is to be found in Hindooism Take all the creeds of humanity, all the observances these creeds impose: Christianmaking for Cachar. Captain Cowley, with called Hindooism. What is Vishmuism, for example? In the beginning, Vishnu is the 'preserver.' Between Siva who organises and Siva who dissolves, there is a place for the power that maintains. That plant which has germinated from the soil will re-enter the soil. Meanwhile, through the influence of an internal power, it lives on and persists in its form. Thus multiplied and developed, Vishnu disappears like the body of he tree, which conceals the inxuriance of its vegetation, and is no longer seen, except in its resultants. The idolatry of the black races Buddhism, the religions of Islam, Christianity, have in turn supplied the elements which it has assimilated. If the play is fair, there can be no 'system' of calculating chances. They remain after a billion rounds precisely what they were when the rounds commenced. As the bank can stop the steady doubling of the stakes, and as it reserves one chance in fifty to itself, its victory against any player who goes on long enough to let the percentage tell, is as inevitable as the occurrence of a cipher in continued multiples of five. If it were not so, how does a bank go on for decades playing every day against all comers, and earning a solid dividend for its proprietors ?

PARISIAN TOPICS. Paris. 20th March. - There is something very touching, but also something very repulsive, in the new play Le Mariage Blanc, brought out this evening at the Theatre Française. The author, M. Jules Lemaitro, is the dramatic critic of the Journal des Débats. The scene is laid at Mentone, or some other health resort in the Riviera. The heroine, Simone, is in the last stage of consumption, and has been Spectator of 21st March, received by the brought there by her mother, in the hope of prolonging her life.
